Bet You Didn't Know There Was an Entire Month Dedicated to Children's Dental Health?

Top Questions We're Asked About Kids' Teeth

1. What's the right age to start a child at your office?
 1. Usually around age 3, but be sure to get your child used to having his/her teeth brushed while laying on the floor, head in your lap while you're sitting on the floor with legs crossed.
2. Are mouthguards necessary for sports?
 1. Only if your child is injured! Seriously, as contact increases in sports, the hardness and fit of the mouthguard becomes more and more important. We've seen teeth knocked out from horsing around at a bus stop, and serious injuries from a tug of war in gym class. This girl got injured at a skating party. You can't prevent everything, but you only will regret this simple protection, until something like this happens to your child.

3. At what age do I stop brushing my child's teeth?

1. Until around 10 you should be directly supervising and augmenting their efforts.

4. How did my child get decay, the water around here is fluoridated?

1. First of all, the water in most South Jersey townships is (thankfully) not fluoridated; and secondly – fluoride is never going to overcome the wrong diet

5. Is there a resource I can turn to for advice on children's teeth?

1. Next time you're in the office, ask for a copy of From Womb to Wisdom, which Dr. Markus helped Dr. Mac Lee write.
